

Join Us For...

BLACK WOMEN WRITE FALL 2018

Writing is a personal process that can sometimes be lonely and isolating, yet it is required for the advancement of our careers at the university level. Black Women Write (BWW) is a collective that aims to provide support, encouragement, and care to Black women writers across the university.

Aims & Goals

- Create a support system for the advancement of Black women's careers
- Encourage the development of relationships across disciplines and throughout the university
- Increase scholarly/creative output
- Provide accountability and support the development of productive writing habits
- Provide a safe venue for critique
- Provide a consistent time and space to write if needed

Lunch will be provided on September 21st

Please RSVP by September 10th!

Dates:

September 21st, 2018
October 19th, 2018
November 30th, 2018

Time & Location:

Noon - 2pm | Hale Hall
Room 101 (Hall Of Fame)

Presented by The Women's Place. Collective co-sponsors include the Office of Diversity & Inclusion, Department of Arts Administration, Education & Policy, and The Barnett Center for Integrated Arts and Enterprise.